

Conservation at a Glance

Theodore Roosevelt was the conservation president. His contributions included:

- The protection of 230 million acres of wild America for posterity
- The creation of 150 new national forests
- All in all, increasing the nation's protected lands from 43 million acres to 193 million acres

While the Land Alliance acres protected are much smaller - 1,200 acres to date with more than 500 acres of public preserves - our objective mirrors that of TR - To preserve and protect, in perpetuity, the greenspaces, farmlands, wetlands and historical sites of Long Island's North Shore for the health of the community today and for the benefit of future generations.
